Organise This! - Meeting Services – A Testimonial from the International Plasma Fractionation Association (IPFA)

IPFA is an international association representing the interests of organisations involved in blood collection and preparation of medicinal products from blood donations. The association has for many years organised and hosted international meetings concerned with blood safety attracting a wide range of international experts working in this field.

Mariska Mooijekind (Organise This! - Meeting Services) has project managed these successful annual events on our behalf with a consistent and professional approach seldom witnessed elsewhere. It has become widely recognised that the success of these events is largely the result of the careful organisation and management of the meeting provided by Organise This! – Meeting Services. The careful attention to all aspects of the meeting arrangements has consistently delivered events which run smoothly, to time and in a relaxed atmosphere created by calm, good humoured and confident guidance both during the meeting preparations and the event itself. The professionalism and willingness to take responsibility and ownership of all important detail as well as the ‘big picture’ has been a key ingredient of the success and this has been widely acknowledged by participants over many years. Of particular importance is the commitment of Ms Mooijekind to establish effective and personal working relationships with participants, delegates and service providers to deliver events where participants can concentrate with confidence on the subject matter of the conference.

Organise This! – Meeting Services has managed many meetings on our behalf to a consistently high standard and we will continue to use Mariska’s expertise for future events.
